MLA In-Text Citations

You may need to reference a variety of sources in your paper. It is essential in MLA that those references be parenthetically cited. MLA follows the “author-page” formatting style for all sources—print and electronic. In the event that your source lacks an author, the citation will include a shortened version of the source’s title and a page number. If the author is mentioned in the signal phrase, the parenthetical reference will only contain the page number.

Citation Guidelines

Citing a Single Author:

- “It is a truth universally acknowledged that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife” (Austen 1).

Citing Multiple Works by the Same Author:

- MacDonald states that “the boy was dressed in a miner’s dress, with a curious cap on his head” (The Princess 51).
- “Hours after hours, a great many of them, went by; and still Diamond lay there” (MacDonald, At the Back 106).

Citing Authors with Same Last Names:

- “While I paced softly on the last sound I expected to hear in so still a region, a laugh, struck my ear” (C. Bronte 91).
- “He raised his missile to hurl it; I commenced a soothing speech, but could not stay his hand” (E. Bronte 85).

Citing a Work by Two Authors:

- “During the mid-1940s Van Johnson was the cause of what Hedda Hopper termed the Bobby-Soxer Blitz” (Parish and Bowers 383).

Citing a Work by Three or More Authors:

- “This chapter introduces and examines a model that is unfamiliar to many. The contemplative approach intentionally creates an environment that enables children to move at a slow pace, in relative quiet, so that they can reflect on a story from Scripture that helps them know who God is” (Carlson et al. 109).

Citing a Long Work within an Anthology:

- “No son is left with his father for Gilgamesh takes them all” (Gilgamesh 13).

Citing a Source With No Author:

- Researchers note that “about half of Shakespeare's plays were printed as one-play quartos” (Folger Shakespeare Library).

Citing an Indirect Source:

- Dewey developed a theory in which he identified five different stages of the reflective process: “(a) perplexity, confusion, and doubt, (b) a conjectural anticipation and tentative interpretation, (c) a careful examination and analysis to clarify the problem at hand, (d) a consequent elaboration of the tentative hypothesis, and, (e) testing the hypothesis by doing something overtly to bring about the anticipated results” (qtd. in Hatcher and Bringle 155).

Citing a Block Quote:

MLA maintains specific formatting guidelines for block quotes, which are defined as quotes that exceed four lines of prose. Indent these quotes one half inch from the left margin and remove quotation marks. Citations should appear after the closing punctuation mark.

Wuthering Heights is a haunting novel that portrays deadly tensions between several characters:

He raised his missile to hurl it; I commenced a soothing speech, but could not stay his hand: the stone struck my bonnet; and then ensued, from the stammering lips of the little fellow, a string of curses, which, whether he comprehended them or not, were delivered with practiced emphasis, and distorted his baby features into a shocking expression of malignity. (E. Bronte 85)

Quote Presentation Examples

There are many ways to represent ideas that are not your own. The most common method is to directly quote the source, but it is also acceptable to paraphrase another's work or present a combination of paraphrasing and direct quotation. You may also introduce the author in the signal phrase to the quote instead of listing him/her in the parenthetical reference. In that case, the author's name will not appear in the parenthetical reference; only the page number is necessary. In a research paper, you may be presenting a fair amount of borrowed information. Because MLA encourages advanced writing, it is important to vary the structure by which you present this information. Some ways to do that are to mention the author in the signal phrase and also to paraphrase the author's original sentence.

Remember: ALL borrowed information MUST be credited to its respective source, regardless of how it is presented in your paper.

Quote-Citation:

In the classic tale, “Jack and Jill went up the hill to fetch a pail of water” (Jones 1).

The passage describes the child as a holy terror whose child-like looks have been “distorted...into a shocking expression of malignity” (E. Bronte 85).

Author in signal phrase before quote:

In his nursery rhyme, Jones says, “Jack and Jill went up the hill to fetch a pail of water” (1).

Charlotte Bronte paints a rather eerie picture of the night: “While I paced softly on the last sound I expected to hear in so still a region, a laugh, struck my ear” (91).

According to Parish and Bowers, “During the mid-1940s Van Johnson was the cause of what Hedda Hopper termed the Bobby-Soxer Blitz” (383).

In their book, Perspectives on Children's Spiritual Formation, Carlson et al. suggest a less familiar model designed to allow children sufficient time and quiet to “reflect on a story from Scripture that helps them know who God is” (109).

Paraphrased:

Jack and Jill headed out to retrieve some water (Jones 1).

Author in signal phrase before paraphrase:

According to Jones, Jack and Jill were on their way up the hill for water (1).
